Reading aloud: the gift of time

There are many different reasons why the elderly give up reading. Common barriers include acute hygienic issues, the lack of strength to hold up a book, dementia and other medical reasons. Using the ability to choose a book or news paper and become absorbed in the words on the page can leave those who have enjoyed reading all their lives feeling both isolated from the real world and the fictional worlds they could discover and discuss.

Giving someone the gift of time, all things and reading to them, can bring them joy and comfort too. At a time when so many people of the seventh and love of their childhood their mother's voice or a bedtime story with Father.

Researchers have found that being read aloud to can stimulate memory and imagination, improves mood and communication and also increase social interactions. There's something about sharing a book and sharing the experiences with the characters in the book, that brings a closeness to a relationship and whilst the suitability of pieces of prose means it is neither demotivating nor demanding it can still can bring great joy deeply beloved collections and unexpected conversations.

For family members or people living with dementia in particular, a Christmas visit can be difficult when their memory may be severely impaired and their responses erratic. Reading aloud can be a simple and relaxing way to spend time just being together.

For those living with dementia hearing poetry whether it is new or recognised from the past, seems to elicit a better response than prose; poems are generally read aloud more as a ritualistic habit and every line is full of condensed and precise description.

If you don't quite know where to begin, there is a book called A Little Book published by Chitra and Winton. It is a book which includes short poems and sections of prose that are especially suitable for reading aloud. They cover a wide variety of topics and have been chosen to share each piece has to do with the appropriate time you need to read it aloud and accompanying thought-provoking notes.

One particularly lovely poem is the Little Long Ago by Eleanor Farjeon which begins:

It felt you shall I, something I remember?

Something that still means a great deal to me.

It was long ago.

A daisy road in summer I remember
A mountain, and an old house, and a tree.

That road, you know

Behind the house. An old woman I remember

In a red dress with a grey cat on her knee

Hurrying under a tree

She seemed the oldest thing I ever remember

But then perhaps I was not aware of that time

It was long ago

Another book to share at this time of year and stimulate reminiscence

In the older age group is Dylan Thomas's A Child's Christmas in Wales. The illustrations done by an artist Edward Ardizzone who grew up in Wales, will be instantly recognisable to any one who viewed pictures books as a child in the 1950s-1960s, reminding the reader of simpler times that have long past. Thomas's recollections of an old-fashioned Christmas are described in poetic language through the eyes of a small child winter's home and decorations as rich and warming as traditional pun-pudding.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year from everyone at Day and Nightcare Assistance.

Sport review of the year 2017

New clubs help Eddie tee up a better 2017

Golf

EDDIE PAPPARELLI is a year ended with a first ever nomination for Sportsman of the Year at the 2017 Canadian Sports Awards to complete a remarkable turnaround for the Montreal-based member.

Papparelli, 38, had a disastrous 2016 and was fighting to rescue his European Tour card towards the end of the year after being forced to return to Q-chool.

But the 2016 season proved to be a turning point for Papparelli as he won a top-20 finish at the US Open at June and enjoyed his best ever season on the European Tour in 2017 thanks to a break.

It has been a year of rebuilding that has paid off for Papparelli who credits changing clubs as one of the main reasons for his upturn in fortunes after putting company with Tiger Woods earlier in the season.

Papparelli is well known off the course for his artistic kinks and credits a new driver that suits his technique for his life placement at the US Open. Jack Nicklaus is a major inspiration.

On another November "I'm thinking, I want to immediately come back to the technical aspect of my game."

"As soon as we added technique to the driver and put a different, higher spinning ball in play, the low ball felt that pretty much disappeared, and my confidence probably returned."

"This change was 100 per cent the reason behind my top-20 at the US Open."

"I was thankful to find the driver that work as a more club-demanded good driver, as an environment, but I was also quite challenging."

The addition of a new driver, Nick Pini, making the change to the club made an impact on the 2016 season's performance.

Third place finishes at both the KLM Open and the Portgale Open, respectively followed the change in position.

Papparelli recorded seven top-10 finishes in eight events in September and October to finish third in the KLM Open.

Earlier this month the world number 130 added another feather in his cap after flying straight from the European Tour season. Papparelli is looking to open a new state of the art high performance centre and shop at his home club.

Terry Smith achieved his highest placed finish at Monza in October.

Strong finish with Red Bull

MotoGP

FORREST and BRIDGES Smith, survived weather hitting season at the 'MotoGP' to finish strongly in his first campaign with new team Red Bull KTM.

In what was an unpredictable 2017 season for most in the field, Smith produced a string of consistent performances that almost saw him dropped as owner of KTM and Red Bull KTM.

Leading in KTM during a wetland riding at the Red Bull Ring in August did not do Smith any favours as he KTM moved a distance in support of the 10-year-old club that he is on in June.

The rider KTM leader of Smith and Paul Edwards did not manage a single podium finish this season, accumulating eight 10th in total.

It was an encouraging season for KTM and Smith signed a three-year deal in August having moved out in 2014 with a loss.

Smith managed a season-best seventh finish on the grid at a rain-soaked Monza in October as he placed ahead of 10th place.

The 2017 season reflects the season he put back on track with Smith riding in 10th place and three places below Edwards in 11th.

Smith would have been hoping for better as his first year with KTM and topped four places better to the standings than his position at the end of the 2016 season.

The 2016 season ended in under contract with KTM for next year and has been a successful one for Smith as he has managed to secure a new contract with KTM.
